Over Militants

By Brian Mooney

Reaters WARSAW — More than 100.000 striking workers in southern Poland returned to work Monday following an appeal from Soli-darity union leader Lech Walesa.

News that the strikers had agreed to return to work came amid signs that Solidarity was beginning to bring its militant branches under control. The independent union, which has been un-der pressure to end a wave of stoppages. announced that other strikes were being settled or that progress was being made in ending them.

The breakthrough on several fronts followed more than three weeks nf serious industrial unrest and appeals hy both union leaders and the Sejm (parliament).

A communique from local strike headquarters in the southern industrial region of Tarnobrzeg said that the 100,000 workers who responded to Mr. Walesa's appeal called off their 10-day stoppage pending government-union talks.

'Nearing an End'

"It seems that this present difficult situation is nearing an end," union spokesman Marek Brunne declared at Solidarity's headquar-ters in Gdansk. He said that the union expected n general strike in the western region of Zielona Gora to end Tuesday and that there were good prospects for a negotiated settlement on the outstanding issue of strike pay in the city of Zyrardow, where 12,000 textile mill workers have been occupying their plants for 21 days. the meeting of shop stewards to press rejection of the formula and scuffles broke out with the police on the picket lines outside the

Mr. Brunne said that the union's 107-member national commission, due to meet in Gdansk on Tues-day, would consider some form of strike limitation on its members as a priority.

Begin Urges All Israeli Parties To Unite in Fighting Saudi Plan

Fram Agency Dispatches JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Menachem Begin urged political apponents Manday to unite with him to block U.S. support for Sau-di Arabia's Middle East peace plan, which he has rejected along with a European initiation

"This is 'no' to the Saudi plan, '"This is 'no' to the Saudi plan, 'no' to the European initiative and 'yes' to Camp David," Mr. Begin said.

The prime minister said he was disturbed by the favorable atten-tion the eight-point Saudi plan has received in the United States and Europe. He termed the plan a "liquidation formula."

"Therefore we announce today simply: These eight points cannot serve as any basis for any discussion whatsoever. They are rejected from start in finish," Mr. Begin said. "There is no party in the world with whom we will be ready to conduct discussions on a plan designed to liquidate Israel. The Camp David agreements are the only nnes that commit us."

In Washington, a senior admin-istration official reaffirmed U.S. support for the Camp David pro-

Asked what the administration intended to do about Mr. Begin's complaint to President Reagan about the Saudi plan, the official

"The United States supports the Camp David process. That has been stated and restated. It is our position. Note was taken of the Saudi eight-point plan but no ad-ditional judgments were made about it. We think the Israelis will come to realize shortly that we support Camp David."

The spokesman was then asked why Mr. Reagan spoke warmly last week of the Saudi plan, Mr. Reagan had said of the Saudi for-mula, "the most significant part is the fact that they recognized Israel as a nation to be negotiated with." The senior official said Monday: "I wouldn't read any special signif-icance in that. The president indi-cated there was an initiative where none existed before and the plan inclicitly or explicitly recognized the rights of all states in the region to exist. The president did not deviate nor intend to deviate from U.S. alterence to the Camp David posal and to adhere to the Camp David peace process that calls for limited autonomy for Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

The prime minister also com-plained that "grating tones" were used against the Americans won opposed the $8.5-billion arms deal that will send advanced radar sur-weillance planes and nther equip-ment to Saudi Arabia. Mr. Begin said he hoped that "those grating tones will cease and the friendship and alliance between American and Israel will be carried forth in deed as well as in word and that the promises given by the president of the United States ... be fulfilled." He proposed formation of an all-party delegation from the Israeparliament to travel in the United States and other countries to present Israel's case.

Shimon Peres, leader of the op-position Labor Party, said he would consider the proposal for an all-party mission. The European initiative as our-lined in the Venice Declaration of 1980 called for Israel to negotiate with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Mr. Begin said of Lord Carring-ton, the British foreign secretary, who is current chairman of the Enropean Common Market council of foreign ministers:

"He can run back and forth between Arab countries but we have no use for this plan. Lord Carring-ton would do better to spend his energies on a better and more just cause

Signs of U.S. support for the Sandi plan proposed in August have raised alarm in Israel,

The proposals call for evacu-ation of land captured by Israel in 1967, including Jerusalem, the dis-mantling of Jewish settlements on Arab land and creation of a Pales-tinian state — actions all bitterly residued by Jerusal resisted by Israel.

"This is not a possible basis for negotiation," Mr. Begin said. "We reject the Saudi plan from point one to point eight." Mr. Begin reiterated that the only path of negotiation acceptable to Israel was contained in the guidelines of the 1978 Camp David accords that Israel signed with Egypt and the United States.

Soviet Sub Is Towed; Captain Is Questioned

From Agency Dispatches STOCKHOLM - The commander of a Soviet submarine that went aground last week near a Swedish naval base left his boat Monday for questioning by Swed-ish officials about what the Soviet vessel was doing in restricted wa-ters near a Swedish naval base.

While the questioning was under way nn a Swedish torpedo boat. Swedish tugs pulled the submarine from the mud where it had heen stranded since last Tuesday and towed it to a safe area, a defense staff spokesman said Monday.

Near gale-force winds have arisen in the area where the sub had been grounded, and the spokeman said it had been pulled out of the mud for safety reasons. "The submarine is clear of the rocks and the mud where it has been stuck, and it is floating," the spokesman said. The Soviet ambassador to Swe-den, Mikhail Jakovlev, called on Foreign Minister Ola Ullsten Sun-

Mr. Ullsten said at a news conference that he was satisfied with the way the inquiry was proceed ing. "I am positively surprised at the speed of the Soviets' expression of regret," he said. "We are nnt negotiating with the government of the Soviet Union. It is we who have set the conditions. These have now been fulfilled."

The Swedish government had said the sub was specially modified for intelligence missions. Authorities had refused to refloat the sub until they received a satisfactory explanation of the incident, saying apologies alone would not be sufficient. It discounted the Soviet skipper's claim that the intrusion was an accident, saying it took bighly skilled maneuvering through tricky waters to get the sub into the area where it went aground.

Gen. Lennart Ljung, Sweden's commander-m-chief, said that Soviet officials had agreed to let Swedish officers inspect the submarine's navigational equipment, nautical charts and duly lists.

A communiqué from the Foreign Ministry said Ambassador Jakovlev and Mr. Uilsten had agreed that the questioning would take place on a Swedish ship outside the military protection zone. The communique said those aboard the submarine would be granted immunity.

The decision to refloat the submarine without waiting for the talks to end was said to have come after its assistant commander made an emergency call. He reportedly told Karlskrona naval headquarters that the sub was in danger of hreaking up because of the weather.

Swedish officials said the submarine signaled for aid on international frequencies while Cmdr. Gushin was being interrogated aboard the Swedish torpedo boat outside the military zone where the vessel ran aground. Witnesses said the high winds and rough seas had ulted the submarine sharply onto its port side.

Official Misbehavior and Inaction Are Said to Go to the Heart of the Country's Crisis leader Edward Gierek from their days as officials in Silesia. Before his dismissal last year, Mr. Szczepanski lived in "monarchical style," according to the newspaper Law and Life. Uniformed guards at the entrance to Mr. Szczepanski's office building were expected to snap to attention and sa-lute as he passed by. He allegedly had many residences, including one with an indoor pool and four prostitutes m attendance, and a fleet of 18 cars.

He is accused of diverting state money to companies he secretly owned in Liechtenstein and Britain, and of using other public funds to import about 900 pornographie films, which he loaned out to high-ranking comrades. A few days ago Mr Szczepanski was indicted on charges out and he was fired.

The indictment is just the tip of an iceberg of investiga-tions into corruption here. At last count, 91 former officials had been inducted and prosecutors were investigating charges against 236 others. Most are accused of diverting public funds and hribe-taking.

Communist Party members and nonparty people alike are clamoring for further action, convinced that wrongdoing on the part of many others is being covered up.

The Solidarity union movement has warned that it will convene a kangaroo court to hear evidence against corrupt officials if official steps are not taken. Even the Polish Democratic Party, an ostensibly independent political group of intellectnals that has in fact been dominated by the Com-mutist Party, called recently for formation of a state tribu-nal to hear cases against officeholders going back to 1976. After a torrent of rank-and-file complaints, the policy-setting Central Committee added the so-called "bringing-togain face criminal as well as party sanctions. The committee called for the completion of all corruption investigations by the end of the year.

The issue goes to the heart of the Polish crisis. Every new disclosure of official misbehavior further crodes the credibility of authorites, and official inaction serves as a lightning rod to focus popular anger.

Bringing people such as Mr. Szczepanski to trial suggests that there will be disclosures concerning others - some of whom are still in power. A co-defendant in the Szczepanski case, for example, is "especially eager to talk," according to Law and Life, which went on to say:

Among other things, the newspaper said, Mr. Szczepanski gave gifts valued at 150,000 zlotys (about $4,600) to Mr. Gierek on his 65th birthday. The sum is equal to about two years' salary for the typical Pole.

Access to Funds

Also, according to Law and Life, Mr. Szczepanski paid Andrzej Jaroszewicz, son of a former Polish premier under Mr. Gierek, 176,000 złotys as "chief specialist outside the affice" of a nonexistent "information-political department" of the state radio and television committee.

A long list of others stand to be embarrassed or worse, the newspaper said. Mr. Szczepanski would be the highest official so far to face criminal charges. That distinction had been held hy Kazimirez Tyranski, former director-general of an import-export operation here, who was sentenced to 15 years in a multimillion-dullar bribery case. Officials in Socialist countries are said to have more opportunity to steal than their counterparts in capitalist countries. Typically, Communist Party members have a virtual monopoly on positions of power, giving them access to pub-hie funds and httle if any public accountability.

"After what had seemed the somewhat 'ascetic' years of the [Wladyslaw] Gomulka leadership [1956-1970], party dis-cipline was relaxed, and under Gierek the party bosses began to indulge their whims more freely than ever," wrote a Radio Free Europe analyst. Anna Sahbat.

By late 1979, the Polish authorities were trying to defuse public criticism hy vowing to punish offenders, but until the emergence of Solidarity. in the summer of 1980, little was done. The union made an official accounting one of its first demands, and several people were later removed from the party.

A Polithuro committee was formed to look into corruption earlier this year. Its report resulted in the expulsion from the party of Mr. Gierek and others last July, but no criminal charges have been brought and the committee has been criticized for trying to paper over the problem.

A party report on homes owned by former officials was censored and could not be printed in any official newspapers.

According to a version published by the underground press, however, Mr. Gierek owned a 21-million-zloty villa m Katowice that had been paid for by the state.

The pace of the accounting on corruption is expected to pick no now that the party Central Committee and Solidar-ity have set a year-end deadline for action. An important clue as to whether there has been a real change of heart in the party will be whether the Szczepanski trial is open to the public. No date for the trial has been published but it is expected to star; before the end of the month

Reagan Meets With Hussein With

U.S. Seeking to Deter Arms Deal With Russia

By John M. er plancs. Greeting Hussein in colorful ceremonies at the White House, Mr. Reagan praised the king as "a wise leader" and warned him of "hateful forces" that "seek to widthe people of the Middle East." With administration officials concerned about signs that the monarch may seek arms from the Soviet Union in order to meet a perceived threat from Syria, Mr. Rengan said that "tension and conflict" in the Middle East "both reflect and increase the power and influence of such hateful forces. When focusing on the internal problems of the region, we must never lose sight of the role of external powers in aggravating those problems."

Reverved Attention

But Hussein, replying in the for-mal exchange of public statements, directed his remarks to the issue of Palestinian rights. The issue has drawn renewed attention here after the assassination of Sadat, because Egyptian-Israeli-U.S. talks on Pal-estinian self-rule in the occupied areas resume shortly. The king said that during the last 25 years of U.S. Jordanian re-lations. "I've been totally committed toward the cause of the Arab people ... "Justice must inevitab-ly, finally prevail." He added: "At this most tarbu-

While not referring to the Pales-tinian issue directly, Mr. Reagan declared that "America seeks peace with honor and security for all the states and peoples of the region - undoubtedly a similar goal to your own."

support of the Democratic Turnhalle Alliance. The so-called issue of impartiality thus reduces itself to the question of how the intense suspicions and mancuvering for advantage on all sides can be balanced out without giving any party an obvious edge in an election. That problem is big enough, but it still leaves the question of South Africa's ultimate objectives in the negotiations. Questioned on this point, the American official who met reporters here offered a carefully circumscribed reply. "We are making a good-faith effort to address legitimate South African concerns," he said. "For that to work we need reciprocity and good faith. So far we have every indication that there is that reciprocity." The American obviously was not inclined to speculate about the questions that preoccupy those who watch the negotiations from the sidelines: Does South Africa really want to give up what some of its generals regard as a strategic position in central Africa? Above all, is Mr. Botha politically secure enough within the dominant Na-tional Party to withstand the white backlash that could be expected to follow a negotiated settlement?

Political Climate

A possible clue came several days ago when the government made a decision on an issue that was unrelated to Namibia but was heavily affected by the political cli-mate in which the prime minister will finally make his decision on the territory. Mr. Botha's Cabinet was confronted with a formal proposal, in-directly instigated by itself, that it make a gesture to South Africa's Indian community by reversing a decisioo made years ago by which a Johannesburg Indian neighbor-bood, called Pageview, was pro-claimed to be "white." Apparently to avoid a fight with the right wing of his party, Mr. Botha finally said no. The analogy is imperfect, but that decision suggested a question about Namibia: Would a white government that shrinks from turning over a small neighborhood to middle-class nonwhites run the risk of turning over a whole coun-try to black nationalists it has suppressed and fought for years?

Those who expect that the answer might be yes argue that South Africa bopes for large rewards from the Reagan administration, such as an end to the embargo oo shipments of enriched uranium, or even a resumption of military cooperation in some form. On the question of the quid pro quo, the American diplomat was especially ervptic. "It is our strong conviction," he said, "that success in this field would have broader implications in terms of our motual interests with South Africa.

day was "foolisb" because it implies that such an understanding had been slipped through without consultation with Congress. "The importation that the United States government, the administration, has been seeking to slip by Congress, without fully apprising Congress of what we are trying to do as long-range strategy for the Middle East based upon the use of Saudi facilities is in itself hudi-crous," Mr. Welles said at o Pentagon briefing. He said, "Few transactions in modern U.S. history have been more visibly scrutinized by the Congress and the U.S. public than the AWACS sale."

The Pentagon acknowledgement substantially undercut the previous denials of Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger who had denied oo Saturday "that the AWACS is the cornerstone of any larger program." Air Force Lt. Col John Garrison read a Pentagon Issue paper that said, "Saudi Arabia has taken the lead in the formation of the Gulf Cooperation Council," which inchoiced five other moderate Gulf states. "The AWACS in its ground environment system affords the capability to link the air defense networks of these states into a unified system." Col. Garrison said that "the situation is one that we are convinced, and we are convinced that the Saudis are convinced, that given certain contingencies that may occur in the Southwest Asia-Per sian Gulf region, specifically in-cluding the Soviet Union, that lit-erally the only force that could meet the military requirements to deter and or defend the region happens to be the forces of the United States. "In that situation, we are coovinced that the Saudis, for their own national security interests will be anxious to have us assist them. Clearly, that is our under-standing of the situation." Mr. Welles admitted that "five or 10 years down the line, we would like to have an integrated air defense for the entire Middle East" but denied that there is yet any formal, written agreement.

The Post article on Sunday said that the sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia is one small piece of a grand defense strategy that had never been part of a formal agreement, but was the product of an explicit oral understand-ing reached last February in Saudi Arabia between military staff officers. It included prepositioned U.S. combat equipment in Saudi Arabia and a Saudi-coordinated air defense network involving five other Arab states. Marine Col. Michael Sheridan, deputy director of contingency planning at the Pentagon, said the Saudi Arabians have not yet agreed to allow the United States to preposition combat equipment ST COUNTRY

French Summit Talks With Africans To Focus on Libyan Troops in Chad

By Joseph Fitchett al Heraid Tribune

PARIS - A Western-supported African plan to get Libyan troops out of Chad moved ahead Monday after a tense weekend that was rife with rumors of a possible Libyanbacked coup attempt there.

Chad's president, Goukouni Oueddei, apparently confident of his position at home, was the first several African leaders arriving of in Paris Monday for French-African summit talks. The summit talks, which are scheduled regularly, coincide with final negotiations for an inter-African peacekeeping force to replace Libyan troops in Chad before the end of the year.

France has led a complex diplomatic maneuver to negotiate a peaceful withdrawal of the Libyans from Chad, a former French colony. Libya intervened there last December to halt civil war. Rolling back the Libyans has been the most imperative diplomatic test in Africa for France's Socialist government since it came to power last spring.

 Rumors of a Libyan-backed coup in Chad last weekend now seen as a last-ditch operation of disinformation to forestall the smooth implementation of the Af-rican plan to oust Col. Qadhafi.

Extremists in France's African intelligence services mounted the disinformation operation, the newspaper Le Monde reported Monday. The operation's apparent aim was to stampede the Paris gov-ernment into a hasty reaction that would have provided a pretext for Libya to strengthen its grip on Chad.

France, which wants Libya out of Chad to reassure surrounding African states where there are major French economic interests, also wants to show that its ocw approach - in which military interventioo is a last resort - can work.

As part of an effort to liberalize the poliocal system, President Bourguiba legalized all political groups except the Tunisian Com-munist Party when the assembly election was announced in April. The Communist Party was legalized in July after being banned since January, 1963. Government officials said Mon-

In cafes and restaurants, and in the scores of tea par-lors that dot the urban landscape, the general sentiment seemed to he that the ruling party could not but have won all seats. Hashmi Ali, a student at the Tunis University, put it this way: "When you enjoy power for so long, why would you want to give it up?" The new assembly will have

Socialist Leadership Quickly Takes Control Of Greek Bureaucracy

ATHENS - Greece's new Socialist government has moved swiftly to wrest control of the state machinery from what it calls the sympathizers and political clients of the former conservative administration.

Opponents charge that the government wants to turn the hureaucracy into a tool for its own policies and supporters. The govmment denies it.

In the just under two weeks that it has been in power, the government has appointed its senior party members and confidants as directors of ministries and as the heads of major state organizations, public utilities and banks.

Some former officials, members or appointees of the outgoing New Democracy Party submitted their resignations without being asked. But the government says it will not proceed with widespread purges of civil servants in order to put mem-bers of its Panhellenic Socialist Movement in key posts.

'No Pogrom

Moscow Presses For French Ties

The Associated Press MOSCOW - The official Soviet newspaper Pravda on Monday called for the removal of "obstacles" blocking Soviet-French political and economic cooperation.

Referring to economic relations, the newspaper said "further head-way" was possible, provided there was "political will and understanding that one should overcome ob-stacles, first of all artificial ones, which stand in the way of mutually advantageous cooperation."

It went on: "Neither can one fail to see that on a number of major international problems, first of all on the acute question of mediumrange nuclear means to he deployed in Western Europe, the Socialist leaders and the French government are orienting themselves mainly toward U.S. and NATO positions.

merit. A rather tougher stand was taken by the new foreign minister, Ioannis Haralambopoulos, who said that he wanted smooth relations with the ministry's personnel, but that he would be "personally very strict" with anyone who tried to undermine the government's new foreign policies.

Officials of the New Democracy opposition say they are giving the government a grace period hefore attacking their policies, but are convinced that the Socialists also will turn the administration into a party instrument. They say thou-sands of party members will have to be given good jobs, both as a means of securing control and to reward them for their support.

Loret M. Ruppe, the organiza-tion's director, said Friday before setting out on a monthlong tour of volunteer outposts in North and West Africa, that she had met with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. about the budgetary prob-lem and had found him "very sup-portive."

"He said what we were doing was right in line with the adminis tration's foreign policy," she said. "But we haven't heard anything yet about our appeal,"

The Corps at Age 20 The Peace Corps, now 20 years old, is very different from what it was in the 1960s. The average age of volunteers is higher — about 27. There are fewer of them — about 5,000 in 60 countries compared with 11,115 in 57 nations in 1967.

Most important to the Peace Corps now is the development of programs in agriculture and alternative sources of energy. Jody Olsen, the regional director for North Africa, the Near East, Asia and the Pacific, said that among these proof the most important.

"This is bringing protein into areas where it is almost impossible to get meat," Miss Olsen said. She also described projects in teaching simple market gardening in primary and secondary schools and the raising of rabbits for food supply.

But eight of them - all but the premiers of Ontario and New Brunswick -oppose Mr. Trudeau's plan because, they say, the charter of rights would diminish provincial powers in Canada's decentralized federation, and because they ob-ject to specifics of the Trudean amending formula.

The constitution now is the British North America Act of 1867, an act of the British Parliament that 182 established the Canadian confederation. The Canadians never took control of the document because the national and provincial governments failed repeatedly over the years to agree on a method for making future amendments. The eight premiers also object in general to Mr. Trudeau's stated intentions to act without their unanimous consent. In an ambiguous ruling in September, the Canadian Supreme Court held that Mr. Trudean was acting legally but in vio-latioo of a longtime practice of ob-taining a consensus of the provinces before asking the British Parliament for constitutional change.

Venice in Fall and Winter: Days of Misty Canals and Sparkling Waterways

By Muriel Spark

MOST people who write about Venice do not tell you what they think of it but how they feel. Venice is a city not to inspire thought but sensations. I think it is something to do with the compound of air, water, architecture and the acoustics. Like the effect of these elements on the ear, there are acoustics of the heart. One can think in Venice, but not about Venice. One absorbs the marvelous place, often while thinking about something else,

I have never been to Venice in summertime, or in festival time, not at the time of any of the cinema and great art shows. My Venice belongs to late autumn and winter, the Venice of meager tourism, the Venetians' everyday city.

I have never known Venice to be crowded or hurried. Perhaps for this reason, when I published a novel set in antumnal Venice. someone was puzzled by the facili-ty with which some of my charac-ters encountered each other in the * 11 In and stifling tourist seasons, when you could not very likely meet the same face two days running.

impact of Venice, it never fails to take one by surprise. After five visits I still gasp. It is not merely the architecture, the palaces, the bridg-es and the general splendor, it is the combination of architecture with water, space, light and color that causes amazement; especially, I think, the element of water.

The first impression of the waterways of Venice is acoustic, so that normal sensations subliminally cease and new ones take their place. Voices, footsteps, bird cries, a cough from the window on the other side of the canal --- all are different from the sounds of the land one has left. The traffic is entirely watery. A greengrocer's shop piled high with vegetables is a ship floating past your window.

Feeling at Home

After a few days of this estrangen ent from normal life I begin to feel at home with it. Some people tell me they can never settle down to a feeling of familiarity with Venice. Sometimes they are people who frequent the super hotels where everything is done to comfort and console the visitors who come with their usual bag of worries. I do not say that this is not a very good thing for a holi-day. But the very nature of Venice is such that the things that usually preoccupy us, from which we are attempting to get away, undergo a shift of perspective after about three days. I have known Venice in a mist and drizzle, where everything is de-pressed and soaking, every bridge is a bridge of sighs. But it is not the usual personal depression one is experiencing; it is something else, something belonging to Venice, it is collective. I think this is some-thing like the reverse of Ruskin's Determine the reverse of Ruskin's sad when majestic Venice is in gloom; and if we are depressed already the fine thing about those gloomy days of Venice is that you forget what you are personally depressed about. Venice is a very good place to be sad. On days of mist, it is like a trip to the Shades. But winter often sparkles and these are the days one can sit outside the hardy musicians per-form their nostalgic Palm Court

Venice has been declining for some hundreds of years. Decline is now of its essence, and I do not think it would be anything like as attractive to ourselves if it were on the way up in the modern sense and flourishing. The Venetians themelves talk little about Venice, oever unless you ask. They are proud of their native city and attached to it, but it does not go to their heads as it does with the rest of us.

There was a time when wealthy foreigners like Milly in Henry James' "The Wings of the Dove could take on a romantic palace and play at princess. Poor Milly got what she demanded, and this was, of course, how James made fun of his contemporaries in Ven-

At Venice, please, if possible, no dreadful, no vulgar hotel; but if it can be at all managed you know what I mean - some fine old rooms, wholly independent, for a series of months. Plenty of them, too, and the more in-teresting the better; part of a palace, historic and picturesque, but strictly inodorous, where we shall be to ourselves, with a cook, don't you know? - with servanus, frescoes, tapestries, antiq-tuities, the thorough make-believe of a settlement.

Byron thought seriously of setthing permanently in Venice to spend the winters there. Permaabout Venice cannot last. Henry James' American girlfriend, if one can stretch a phrase, settled in Venice only to throw herself out of window one dark night, to her death. Byron's Venetian girl, who threw herself into the canal, was careful to be rescued

However, it is difficult not to be romantic about Venice. Myself, I arrived on one of my visits - it was early in November -- close to midnight. The gondoliers had struck and put up notices demand-ing that their claims should be dealt with "globally." There was a squall blowing in from the lagoon. It was quite a plight for me, there on the landing stage, for my luggage was heavy with reference books (I was correcting the proofs of my Venetian oovel "Territorial Rights"). But it was really exciting to strike a bargain with some men on a coal barge that rocked and plunged in the wind and surge, sooty cargo, up the Grand Canal where doges and dowagers were once wont to ride in state.

Water Voices

The night porter at my lodgings showed oo surprise; he merely came down to the landing stage to collect me and my goods, dripping rags that we were, and to make sure that the men had oot overcharged me. I will always remember that midnight journey through the black water, and the calling of the bargemen, wild seabird noises, as every oow and again they passed another laden vessel. The palaces were mostly in darkness with the water splashing their sides, the painted mooring poles gleaming suddenly in the light of our passing; the few lights from the windows were dim and greenish, always from tiny windows at the top. Nobody walked on the banks, and yet a strange effect I can only describe as water voices came from those sidewalks and landing stages. Perhaps they were ghosts, wet and cold.

I usually stay st a charming, fairly old pensione near the Accana, which sits on an angle of the Grand Canal and a side canal. In time, after I had taken in day by day all the sights and spectacles of Venice, the incredible St. Mark's church, the happy square with its shops full of expensive junk, the Tintorettos, museums and gallerics and all those already hyper-de-scribed stones of Venice. I began to the boat. to form a Venice of my own.

It is rather as one does with acquaintances when one goes to live for a length of time in a new country — eventually one whittles them down to an affectionate few. These I visit again and again in my winter walks and excursions, well wrapped up and wearing boots like everyone else. Most men and women wear warm hats, too.

Off-Second Visit

Since one of the advantages of an off-season visit is that there are no crowds, it is possible to sit without interruption almost alone in the Church of the Frari looking at Titian's "Assumption." I love to walk around the Ducal Palace to see those four charming Tetrarchs, timid and proper and quietly influ-ential, modestly embracing each other in a formal half-huddle. Giorgione's mysterious "Tempest" in the Accademia is another of my best-loved familiars.

And I remember a snany winter trip, and also a cold bleak one, with a friend in the ferryboat to Torcello, one of the islands in the Venetian lagoon where very little goes on now except the magnificent cathedral, part Gothic, part Byzantine. There is a vast biblical natrative done in seventh-century mosaics at one end, and a goldenbacked mosaic of the Madonna behind the alter, hypnotically radiant

But going behind the altar to snoop we waded into a deep pool of water that had seeped into that glorious building. We were glad of our boots. In winter there are no restaurants open on the smaller islands, oo bar on the ferryboats. But sweet visitors do not care, and the sour ones do oot matter.

The art treasures apart, what I return to again and again are the more homely friends of my walks through the windy call and the placid, sometimes leafy squares of Venice. These include a men's hat

Waterborne Funerals

Funerals in Venice, of course, are a stately procession. The city lays on a great show, with giltedged barges and coffins carved within an inch of their lives. Who wouldn't want to be in your shoes? Especially when those feet will be taking you to the famous cheese markets, flower auctions, gorgeous canals, windmills, and a Van Gogh or two. So share it all with your family and friends back home. But before you make that call, here are some guilder-saving tips. SAVE ON SURCHARGES

Many hotels outside the U.S. charge exorbitant surcharge fees on international calls. And sometimes the fees are greater than the cost of the call itself. But if your hotel has TELEPLAN, the way to keep hotel surcharges reasonable, go ahead and call. No Teleplan? Read on!

There are other ways to save money. SAVE WITH A SHORTIE

In most countries there's no threeminute minimum on self-dialed calls. So if your hotel offers International Dialing from your room, place a short call home and have them call you back. The surcharge on short calls is low. And you pay for the callback from the States with dollars, not local currency, when you get your next home or office phone bill.

SAVE THESE OTHER WAYS Telephone Company credit card and collect calls may be placed in many countries. And where they are, the hotel surcharges on such calls are usually low. Or, you can avoid surcharges altogether by calling from the post office or from other telephone centers.

SAVE NIGHTS & WEEKENDS

Always check to see whether the country you're in has lower rates at night and on weekends. Usually the savings are considerable.

Now that you've learned to walk on wood, you've saved a little shoe leather. And now that you've learned the calling tips, you'll find it easy to foot the phone bill.

Aid and Basic Questions

'Latent Anti-Semitism'

The Senate added two useful riders when it approved the Reagan administration's $6.7billion foreign aid package. As requested by President Reagan, it removed long-standing restrictions on aid to Chile and Pakistan. But, without asking, the president also got what he needs: an amber warning that Congress will not forget Chile's human rights abuses or Pakistan's nuclear ambitions. That is a minimal signal for an amnesia-prone administration

In lifting the 1976 ban on aid to Chile, the Senate yielded two-thirds of a loaf. Chile's champions argue that its military regime has settled for a milder repression and, in any case, is sturdily anti-Communist. They concede but discount the Santiago regime's involvement in the 1976 murder of the exiled Orlando Letelier on a Washington street.

Unfortunately, Chile has repaid Reagan's indulgence with a new crackdown on democratic opponents and by closing its courts to further appeals in the Letelier scandal. The least the Senate could honorably do was to require the president to certify as the aid is dispensed that Chile is making significant progress on human rights and is no longer promoting terrorism abroad. In so voting, the Senate also obtained an assurance from Chairman Charles Percy that the Foreign Relations Committee would insist on hearings to examine such assurances.

Such certification is not an empty formula, as the case of Pakistan proves. Under present law, Pakistan cannot qualify for aid unless Reagan gives formal assurance that it is not developing nuclear weapons. For all his eagemess to help Pakistan, Reagan refuses to go that far, and he asked that the requirement be dropped. But Sen. John Glenn's compromise is the better solution: Any nonnuclear country automatically forfeits American aid if it explodes a nuclear device.

These riders merit approval by the House. The Senate has gone about as far as it should to give the Reagan administration a freer hand without misleading foreign nations about the true American consensus on fundamental questions.

The Sandinista Victory The Socialists Have Indeed Won, At Stake in Nicaragua

By Dial Torgerson

MANAGUA - The revolution in Nicaragua, which started out with the good will of much of the world, has reached what could be the end of a dream. The Sandinistas who toppled the Somoza dictatorship in 1979 are striking harshly at dissent.

When the country's most prominent industrialists wrote an open letter to the ruling junta predicting crisis, and the junta arrested them, friends of Nicaragua were appalled. When a former member of the junta criticized their arrest, a pro-Sandinista mob "spontaneous-ly" attacked his home.

Some of the businessmen now under arrest fought against the Somoza regime and stayed in Ni-caragna to help with reconstruc-tion work. To outsiders it seems that the junta is turning paranoid. What is it afraid of?

• Dissent, clearly. The San-dinistas speak increasingly these days of "us" and "them."

• The United States. When 150 U.S. Navy men took part in a joint maneuver with Honduran patrol boats, the Nicaraguan defense minister ordered a military state of alert, as if in fear of invasion.

• The Somocistas, as the ex-pelled remnants of the National Guard of the late Anastasio Somoza are called. Marauders from a Somocista camp in Honduras crossed into Nicaragua last month and killed two peasants and two Cuban teachers.

promulgated laws to combat "eco-nomic sabotage," under which businesses could be seized by the government on the slightest pretext. Since 50 percent of the means of production had already been nationalized, this caused near-penic in the private sector.

Like most of the junta's recent moves, this exacerbated the conditions it sought to curb. Reinvestment of capital in Nicaragua seemed hazardous. Crafty businessmen began to figure how to get their money out.

An economic upswing under way since Somoza fled faded, and foreign bankers, wary of nationalization, declined to make loans. Foreign reserves of hard cash dwindled. The junta, which had lost U.S. aid because of its support for Salvadoran rebels, sought aid from Libya and other "progres-sive" countries to avert a shortage of operating capital.

This is what the industrialists were talking about in their open letter to Comandante Daniel Ortega Saavedra, who heads the threeman junta, when they wrote him saying the country was nearing "a point of no return.

The arrests of the seven men who signed the letter were ordered by the junta and the nine-man directorate of the Sandinista Party, which together run things. The pictures of distinguished busines being led into court on charges of endangering national security did not encourage the middle class. Late last month so many people were leaving that it was impossible to book a flight from Managua to Mexico City or Miami.

The leaders of three centrist par-ties — the "bourgeoisie," in San-dinista terms — had their passports seized as they prepared to leave for Europe. "They were going to speak out against us," a

PARIS — Greece has followed France to the left. Can Italy and Spain be far behind? Socialists in Europe would like to think not — as if Socialism had become a la mode

So What Comes Next for France?

By William Plaff

But Greece did not turn left merely because France had done so, and the rest of southern Europe will not do so because Greece did. Voters react to what is good or bad in their own situations.

Greek voters, like the French before them, resented the economic difficulties of recent years. Conservatives had ruled Greece virtually since the war, with an interlade of reactionary military dictatorship that enjoyed Washington's benevolence.

The Greek Socialist government of Andreas Pa-pandreou shares with the French Socialists a vision of change which must be taken seriously — of old inequities corrected, fraternity, a new start. Nationalizations have totemistic value for both: A young French Cabinet minister pointed out a few days ago that the word "nationalization" has the word "na-tion" in it, and he said he thought this important.

Americans, familiar with British nationalizations, associate the idea with subsidized incompetence, sloth, make-work and bureaucracy. For the French and Greek Socialists, national enterprise is intended to mean innovation, technical leadership, en-trepreneurial elan, a morale that is based in service rather than self-interest.

Economic Reality

The leaders talk a lot about the "third industrial revolution," in which Americans and Japanese are supposed already to be in the lead. They argue that state companies can overtake that lead. At the same time they want to decentralize power, and they be-lieve that this will release new energies in their soci-tion. They have a writer three areas in their societies. They have a rather vague notion of a new inter-national division of labor based on a new relationship to the Third World. But for the French Socialists the trouble has already begin. They are discovering the limits to what they can do. After five months they are falling into embarrassing internal disputes over how they ought to proceed, and in economic management this has produced confusion.

A reflationary budget was followed within days by devaluation and new deflationary policies. The un-pleasant prospect now is of both more inflation and more unemployment in the months to come, plus a ty rhetoric. The party congress just completed was markedly intemperate in what was said.

Serious labor unrest is beginning. Workers had expected something important to happen, and it hasn't. A Renault worker said the other day that he had worked all his life in a stinking job, waiting for this moment. "I voted for Francois Mittertand because I thought that in a Socialist France my life would be different." He is now on strike. The strikers want shorter hours, workers' committees, more of a say over how things are run. But most of all they want their lives changed.

Battles Long Won

How is this to be done? It certainly is possible, although far more difficult than the Socialists thought, to nationalize the biggest banks and compa-nies, create regional assemblies, remove some of the privileges of the well-to-do, lift the income and status of working people. But when all that is done, they know in their hearts that the glorious dawn will not dawn. Frenchmen will still be unemployed, foreign creditors will demand payment in sound money, successful competition will depend upon productivity, cessful competition will depend upon productivity, inflation will continue to provoke the voters. An easy recourse would be radicalization of the program. But the French elected the Socialists by imming marginally away from a 23-year commitment to moderately conservative governments. There was no mandate for revolution. They voted for the Social-ists because Francois Mitterrand had succeeded in reassuring them that even though his Socialists were allied with the Communists, moderation and good sense would prevail — that he was no adventurer. But Socialism's essential problem is that it was a success long ago. The right likes to say that Socialism has never worked. That is nonsense. It has been working in the West for the last 30 years. It has success low well that all the conservative parties have stolen the Socialists' policies. Welfare government, social insurance, a measure of co-management, state planning and investment all cuist under the most conservative Western governments. The Socialists have won all of their most important policy battles. Everyone else has come over to their side. This leaves them today, in Greece as in France, price are immersed burden of normalise conservations and partice for the most important policy battles.

Everyone else has come over to their side. This leaves them today, in Greece as in France, with an immense burden of popular expectations and hope, and few practical ideas about new things to do. They place so much importance on nationalization and decentralization — inconsistent ideas — precise-ly because there is so little else in their policy cup-board. But how is nationalization to help that Re-nault worker who would like, please, his life to be different? It Seems Like Old Times

By Richard Cohen

WASHINGTON - Like Japanese sol-W diers who surface years after the end of World War II, up from the nether world two weeks ago came Katherine Boudin and other members of the Weath-er Underground with their guns blazing. They allegedly killed two cops and a pri-vate guard north of New York, maybe had plans for some bombings, but didn't realize that the war was lost long ago. You can understand their confusion.

They must have looked around and conchuded that it was the 1960s all over again. The time looked ripe for action, and if they had any doubts about it they could have read the coverage of their own arrest. In The Washington Post, Boudin, as political a person as you're ever likely to find, was called "an underground moll" - as sexist an epithet as you're likely to find. The clock has been turned back.

Sexism has returned. It is now once again permissible to call grown women "girls." It is apparently OK, too, to make jokes about busts and legs and to make women, but never men, account for their success. The new role model for women seems to be Nancy Reagan, who appears to do little more than spend money and have lunch. Gone is Rosalym Carter's concern for the mentally ill, or Betty Ford's activism. Instead we have returned

In the economy, things Americans thought had been won ara being threat-ened and in some cases repealed. The Great Society that the likes of Boudin mocked as too little and too late is now but a memory. Unemployment is at 7.5 percent and America is in a recession. It is tougher to be poor than it has been in quite some time, and for some people it is ard Nixon. "This fact will greatly affect the consequences if the sale fails to go through." Let people of honor, starting with the president, remove this stain on our politics. Most American Jews opposed the AWACS sale, but so did most other Americans; and Israel's security was only one reason to object. Jewish lobbyists waged a vigorous campaign; indeed, they began before the Israeli government joined the challenge. But on the other side, promoting the deal, was an equal-ly vigorous lobby of weapons makers, oil companies and Saudi agents and traders. Neither side had any special claim on the "American interest." Neither lacked for "foreign" entanglements.

In fact, American Jews are not slavish apologists for every Israeli policy. Many have been critical of the bombings of Baghdad and Beirut, and of Israeli policies in the West Bank. But even when Jews stand united, there can be no tolerance for dark matterings about disloyalty, and coded complaints about their influence.

Jews have as much right to read concern for Israel into their view of the national interest as do Greek Americans opposing aid to Turkey or black Americans demanding opposition to South Africa's racism. Such exertions, whether or not they are persuasive, do not weaken America. On the contrary, there can be no strong foreign policy that ignores the combined yearnings of domestic interests.

Unequal Interest Costs

High interest rates are a burden on the whole economy, but the burden is not distributed uniformly. Because of the interplay between the tax system and inflation, the weight of high rates rests much more heavily on people with modest incomes and on businesses that run losses.

The explanation is that interest costs are a deduction from the income on which you pay taxes. The rates on mortgages are over 18 percent — a staggering figure, but more staggering for some than others. If you are in the 50-percent tax bracket, the government is, in effect, paying half of your interest. With an 18-percent mortgage, your half would be 9 percent. That is hardly more than the rate of inflation. The real rate of interest is whatever you are paying above the inflation rate - which means that, for the taxpayer in the 50-percent bracket, the real after-tax cost of that mortgage is close to zero.

But a family with an average income will probably find itself in the 19-percent tax bracket next year, which means that the gov-mally poor, suffered declining per capita incomes in the 1970s and many are expected to decline further this decade. Africa's debt has increased fivefold since 1970, and 26 coun-ernment pays only 19 percent of its interest. For that family, the real after-tax cost of the same mortgage would be somewhere around 6 percent a year. The lower your income, the higher your share of the actual cost of a loan.

For corporations, the differential is even sharper. The corporate income tax is 46 percent, which means that the government carries 46 percent of the interest costs of a profitable company. If the company borrows at the prime rate, its real after-tax cost is in the range of 2 percent. If it ceases making a profit and no longer has taxes against which to offset its deductions, the cost of the loan is five times as high. For individual taxpayers, the Senate Finance Committee is now discussing ceilings on the tax deductions for mortgage interest. The senators' purpose is to raise the revenue that the Treasury urgently needs. But, as the arithmetic of the after-tax rates suggests, social equity also argues forcefully in favor of a limit on interest deductions. THE WASHINGTON POST.

NEW YORK - The most stirring deliverance in the state campaign thus far came from Mr. Elihu Root, Secretary of State, who as the spokesman of President Roosevelt made his first and only address in Oneida County. It had been felt by many that the Republicans were apathetic and did not appreciate what the election of Mr. Hearst would mean. The speech is a most severe arraignment of Mr. Hearst, his pretensions, his methods, his insincerity, his power for evil and his inhumanity in treating public men. He described Mr. Hearst as a demagogue and especially dangerous specimen of the class that has endangered not only popular government but also genuine reforms.

PARIS - Rising on a wave of tumultuous welcome indicative of the nation's initial approval of his negotiations at Washington, Premier Pierre Laval returned in triumph to Paris yesterday. There is a fairly general understanding, which seems to be endorsed by the things that Mr. Laval has allowed to be understood, that the French premier has returned to Paris with a free hand in the tackling of European problems. In return for America's sympathetic attitude in the coming months, Mr. Laval is believed to have given definite assurances to President Hoover that France will make a big endeavor to come to political as well as economic understanding with Germany.

By Stephen Orgel By Stephen Orgel bus Voyager-2 is now long past Saturn, and despite every-thing it and Voyager-1 have told us, the planet, say the astronomers in Pasadena, is more mysterious than ever. This apparently comes as a surprise to scientists. To a stu-dent of mythology, it is exactly what one would expect of Saturn, the most thoroughly ambignous figure in the classical pantheon. Saturn — or Kronos, to the Greeks — was the child of Uranus and the father of Zeus. He and his brothers, the Titans, overthrew their father, who had imprisoned them or tried to destroy them Kronos then ruled the heavens, but encies toward both genius and sui-cide. To the ancients, all this was not myth but science: Saturn in

This interpretation was rein-forced by a fortuitous linguistic fact: Saturn's Greek name, Kro-nos, and the Greek for "time," chronos, are nearly identical. The myth of Saturn therefore became an allegory of time: He is the god of agriculture because we mature through time; he devours his children because time also destroys what it creates. The modern personification of Father Time, an old man in classical dress carrying a sickle, preserves the ancient Saturn -although the sickle, which origi-nally implied the fruitfulness of agnculture, has ironically become symbolic of death.

Astrologically ambiguous, too, Saturn presides over the melan-classical physiology controlled the body's supply of black bile, the melancholic humor. Such a genus had a bright side, too, and he was the patton of philosophy as well as madness madness. In the Renaissance he became the patron especially of artists. To the ancients, the artist's god was Mercury - swift, witty, inventive - but the Renaissance invested artists with the philosopher's gen-ius, and therefore with his melancholy as well. Saturn's renaissance was brief. By the 17th century, artistic melan-choly had given way to an outgo-ing, worldly, even political style. Rubens negotiated Charles I's peace with Spain: The King saw his favorite painter as a genius, and therefore as imminably raand therefore as imminently ra-tional and reliable.

By the middle of the 17th century, the ancient creator and desuroyhad all but been laid to rest. With the naming of Uranus late in the 18th century, Saturn lost even his seniority — to his own father.

Triumph-Adler Chairman Gerd Weers resigned earlier this year and the subsidiary announced Monday he will be succeeded by Peter Niedner, chief executive of an engineering firm.

Volkswagen reported its first loss since 1975 in this year's second quarter - 28 million Deutsche marks - due to losses by Triumph-Adler and the group's Brazilian subsidiary, and poor sales in Germany and the United States. Group profits fell to 321 million DM last year, down almost 52 percent from 1979. Sources have said the group is likely to break even this year.

Inside Knowledge

Mr. Hahn's deep inside knowledge of the Wolfsburg-based company, where he worked for 18 years before moving to Conti Gummi in 1973, made him the favorite to

He began his career at the Italian car giant Fiat and joined Volkswagen as head of its export department before becoming president of the company's U.S. subsidiary, Volkswagen of America, for five years.

After returning to West Germany in 1964, he rose to be anaging board member with responsibility for sales. But criticism of Volkswagen's sales policy, which compaoy insiders blamed for a 1971 profit slump, and sharp divi-sions of opinico with Rudolf Leiding, Volkswagen's chief from 1972 to 1974. led to his resignation.

Mr. Hahn joined Cooti Gummi the year after it had re-corded its first loss since World War II. He started a radical program of management changes, structural reorganization and layoffs which cut the work force to 18,300 last year from 23,400 on his arrival.

The company returned to profit in 1975 and last year was able to pay its first dividend to shareholders since 1971.

Mr. Hahn is known to enjoy the support of Volkswagen's trade unions and of leading local politicians — both nf which are represented on the firm's supervisory board. The presiding board which selected him is made up of the chairmen of Volkswagen's supervisory board and works council, the head of West Germany's main engineering unioo IG Metall, and two members of the state government of Lower Saxooy, which has a 20-percent stake in the compa-

oy. Mr. Schmuecker was credited with pushing a new model line through its final stages, and helping Volkswagen re-bound in 1976 from losses the twn preceding years, reaching a peak profit level of 667 million DM in 1979.

criticism of its tight money policies is felt by many OECD governments to be the antithe-sis of the kind of cooperative economic poli-cy-making the organization is supposed to SCIVED1. In addition, there is resentment in Europe that Mr. Haig apparently would offer such an important international post as compensation to someone he wants to get rid of as a result of a domestic disagreement. "Getting fired by the scoretary of state is hardly a qualification for the post," said one Europe-an ambassador to the OECD.

Unanimous Vote Required

A further European argument is that the United States already has its share of important international economic jobs, since, by tradition, it has always nominated the president of the World Bank. Since the secretary general must be unanimously approved by the 24 OECD member governments, only one dissenting vote would be needed to stop Mr. Rashish from getting the post. Meanwhile, European OECD members

Massive Dam Project Set to Start In W. Africa After Years of Study

By Thomas Kamm mational Herald Tribune

General Contraction of the International Herald Trabone DAKAR, Senegal — One of Af-lica's most ambitions — and con-troversial — regional development projects, a three-natioo scheme to harness the Senegal River and halt the advance of the Sahara desert, will finally begin this month after the decades of feasibility studies and Fs , several faise starts. The project, involving two dams, An hep should turn Mauritania, Senegal and Mali, the three drought-ridden and Mali, the three drought-huden countries grouped within the Sene-tion (known by its French acro-nym OMVS), into surplus food

TARY broducers. The construction of a dam near the Senegalese village of Diama, in the Senegal River Delta, is sheduled to start this month. The dam will allow irrigation of the fertile delta region and stem the penetratioo of sea water onto the fields in the delta.

Work on the second dam, 930 kilometers (560 miles) upstream in Manantali, on the Bafing tributary in Mali, is planned to begin in ear-ly 1982, said OMVS officials. This dam will regulate the flow of the river, which dries up three months of the year, to allow navigation oo the river from the Senegalese port of Saint-Louis, on the Atlantic Ocean, to the Malian town of Kayes, giving landlocked Mali an outlet on the sea.

Hydroelectricity

The dam will also provide for irrigatioo and generate hydroelectri-city for the extraction of mineral resources in eastern Senegal and potential resources in Mali. Both dams are scheduled to be completed by 1987.

The agricultural and industrial percent), economists wonder how aims of the project should provide the three countries, which already The agricultural and industrial drinking water to urban areas. The first stage of the plan calls for the irrigation of 375,000 hec-tars, which will allow two regular harvests a year instead of the present uncertain and low-yielding crops dependant on sparse rainfall and receeding flood water. Eventually, 800,000 hectars will be irrigated during the next 50 years.

While Omar Ba, OMVS director of investments, said member states look to the project as "a means of escapiog uoderdevelopmeot," Western and international aid organizations have expressed doubts as to the necessity of so costly and large a project and worry about its disrupting social and environmental effects.

$2-Billion Price Tag

The two dams alone will cost $736 million and related irrigation and infrastructure projects will bring the total cost of the project to nearly $2 billion. Two years ago, the dams cost $550 million, and a recent report noted that inflation pushes the price tag up 0.8 percent every month.

Saudi Arabia has contributed $150 million to the project. Other major donors are Knwait ($100 million.) West Germany ($98 million.) France and Abu Dhabi ($70 million each.) OMVS member states are contributing $40.3 mil-lion, or 5 percent of the cost of the dams, built by French, Spanish and West German companies.

Although the loans are on very favorable terms, (many of them have 50-year maturities, 10 years of grace and interest rates of 3 to 4 aid experts question the need for the dams. "A lot can be done before building dams," an official of an international aid institution said. Others wonder whether two dams are necessary. They point to a West German study that said that the flow from the Manantali dam was sufficient to prevent the advance of sea-water and suggest that both dams are being built so that each member of the OMVS can feel it is getting something out of the scheme. "One of the dams is a trade-off," a diplomat said.

Moreover, some development

'Vital Problem'

OMVS officials concede that some of these arguments are valid, but countered Mr. Ba, "The vital problem in the Sahel is to have control over water ... We can't be sure that there will always be water if we don't build the dams." The three member countries seek different uses from the dams

- Senegal is interested mainly in irrigation and hydroelectric power, Mali in navigation and hydroelec-tricity and Mauritania in irrigation — and both dams are necessary to satisfy these needs, officials say.

"The cost is high compared to the economic and financial situa-tion of the member countries," Mr. admitted. "Is it because we Ba admitted, "Is it because we have little money that we should fold our arms or should we con-tract a debt?" asked Sheikh Bati Ould Benani, OMVS director of planning and coordination. "When food self-sufficiency is attainable, we must make an effort," said Ab-dukhi Hamdiane the OMVS dallahi Hamdinou, the OMVS representative in Saint-Louis. " How long can we remain dependent?"

These officials are aware of the The scheme will involve the displacement of 10,000 persons, but ecological repercussions of the its ultimate aim is to arrest the project, such as the spread of the drift of people away from the val-ley. Some aid officials even suggest parasitic disease Bilharzia or the elimination of species of fish. that France and West Germany are interested in the project be-cause it allows them to revitalize But when confronted with this question, they refer to a report by the U.S. Agency for International Development on the scheme's environmental impact. The report states, The benefits to be derived from the OMVS development program by the citizens of the Senegal River basin far outweigh the adverse consent nces."

Ouestion of Priorities

And, said Sheikh Bati, "it's nice to be concerned about the disappearance of some fish species, but what about the people who are dy-ing of hunger? The project can give us food self-sufficiency."

U.K. Reported Studying EMS Plan A recent analysis by the influen-tial London Business School for and in hard

LONDON - Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has ordered a review of British policy oo the Eu-ropean Monetary System of linked exchange rates for discussion by senior ministers and advisers next week, official sources said Monday. They said Britain is closer to full membership in the system than at any time since its creation two and a half years ago.

Although Mrs. Thatcher is still against participation in the EMS, powerful political arguments in favor of full membership are being put both inside the government and by Britain's EEC partners, they said.

The EMS was set up in March 1979 to provide a European zone of stability in a world of volatile exchange rates. It limits the extent to which its eight member curren-cies can fluetuate against each other, while floating against outside currencies.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Geoffrey Howe said Monday: "It's a finely balanced question, but I believe the disadvantages (of join-ing) outweigh the potential advanages.

The main reason against membership, he said, was the British pound's tendency to be affected by their construction industry with Arab funds and to induce migrant Bell Canada Coupon Set workers in their countries to return bome to the valley. Despite these criticisms and cyn-ical considerations, aid officials say that, whatever the cost of the project and the economie situatioo of the member states, construction of the dams "may prove to be a visionary move." The dams will allow regular rice, cereal and vegeta-ble harvests in a region that im-ports 850,000 tons of cereals in a good year, according to Mr. Bati. as 7¼ percent. oil-market developments, which means it often moves in the opposite direction to EMS currencies such as the Deutsche mark.

Official sources said that this factor was possibly less important in the light of the OPEC price agreement reached recently in Geneva which offered the prospect of greater oil-price stability over the next 15 months by setting a unified price of $34 a barrel until the end of 1987

EMS members must defend their currencies by intervening on the foreign exchanges when they breach the fluctuation limits. Uotil recently such intervention would have been incompatible with the British monetary policy.

But there has been n policy shift in London this year, and the exchange rate is more prominent in the authorities' day-to-day man-agement of financial markets. The official sources said this was one of the reasons for the current review. Treasury calculations show that the cost of market interventions on Britain's reserves required by EMS membership would have been relatively small over the past nine months since the pound hit its peak against the dollar, they said.

Benefits Seen

The issue of full British membership of the EMS was broached at a meeting of EEC finance ministers here last weekend chaired by Sir Geoffrey, bot the chancellor was resolutely silent, conference sources said.

Italy to Start Queue System In International Borrowing

BOLOGNA, Italy --- The Bank of Italy and the Treasury Ministry have agreed to set up a queue system to regulate the access of Italian borrowers to international capital markets, Bank of Italy Governor Carlo Ciampi said,

He mentioned the system while addressing the annual meeting of the Italian Forex Club over the weekend, but gave no details. But Bank of Italy officials said Treasury Minister Benjamino Andreatta charged Mario Sarcinelli, the central bank deputy directorgeneral, with the task of coordinating large loan issues, mainly by state sector borrowers.

For the past two months the central bank has been monitoring talian issues and advising poten tial borrowers on timing to avoid overloading the markets with Ital-ian paper, the officials said.

They disputed recent press re-ports that some Italian borrowers debt to foreign suppliers expanded after the imposition of the 30-per-cent import deposit requirement in

May. "Overall, taking account of short-, medium- and long-term transactions, the financial position of the country has deteriorated ... excluding gold reserves, from a net credit position at end-1979 to approximate balance at end-1980 and a oet debt position of about $8 billion in October," the central bank governor said.

Unsolicited Proposals

"In fact, the very banks which complain loudest have been com-iog with unsolicited loan propos-als, and getting turned away," one official said,

Last month's lapse of a $500-million loan offer for the Italian state railways was not a failure by the railways but a failure by the banks to offer acceptable terms, he said.

Contacts are still taking place with various banks to revive the loan project, he added. Mr. Ciampi told the Forex Club meeting that latest estimates indi-cate ltaly's current account pay-ments deficit this year will widen in line with previous official fore-casts to 11 prillico lire ($9.166 billion) from 8.4 trillion last year.

"This volume is the third biography of Fitzgerald in English, in addition to sbelves of reminiscences and critical studies. Its justification is that research has provided new evidence in the 20 years since the publication of Andrew Turnbull's "Scott Fitzgerald." I bave corrected and augmented the record. When asked what is new in this hiography. I reply, 'More facts." To a great extent, therefore, one's interest in this hiography is going to depend on the extent of one's desire

Heavy Emphasis on Money Yet this obsessive interest in the minutiae of Fitzgerald's life does have its rewards, and they should not be minimized. To some it will seem merely pedantic that there is a heavy emphasis in this book on money, for ex-ample, to the extent of including an appendix that lists every nickel of Fitzgerald's income as he recorded it in his ledgers. Yet the cumulative effect of this massive detail is instruc-tive and revealing; it demonstrates as nothing else can that Fitzgerald had to write short stories for the commercial magazines in order to underwrite the extravagant life that he and Zelda insisted opon living, with unclear but hardly salubrious effect upon his writing of novels. Similarly, Bruccoli publishes extensive extracts from a recorded conver-sadon that Scott and Zelda had with her doctor in the spring of 1933 in Baltimore. This conversation is nowhere mentioned by Mizener, ac-knowledged in passing by Turnbull, and quoted only in hrief hy Nancy Milford in "Zeida." Bruccoli, in his dogged way, reprints several pages of it — and thus allows us to judge its contents for ourselves. What we see is not pretty: a marriage falling to pieces in an atmosphere of bitterness and recrimination, tempered by an aching nostalgia for a lost love. At the time, Zelda had recently published her nov-el, "Save Me the Waltz," and Scott's comments to her in the presence of proud that he was discharging his obfn this respect as in many others. Bruccoli is a perceptive studeot of his subject. What he has to say about such matters as Fitzgerald's pervasive sense of social interiority, his obsession with football beroism and his fear of latent homosexuality - to name but three - seems to be entirely accurate. Yet there is a real strangeness to the book. Bruccoli's own feelings about Fitzgerald are obviously intense and probably complicated, yet he writes about him with an utter absence of feeling. "Some Sort of Epic Grandeur" has the passion of a timetable; for all its thoroughness, it gives the reader little sense of Fitzgerald, little sense that Bruccoli has worked his way past "more facts" toward the mner man. But that is not Bruccoli's style; he is entitled to this distance that, for whatever reason, be prefers to maintain be-tween himself and his subject. His research is scrupulous and meticulous, and it will be surprising if a more thorough Fitzgerald biography is ever written. But a better-written one -Turnbull's - already has been. Bruccoli writes the way Howard Cosell talks. He says that Fitzgerald "regarded stories as a way to subvene nov-els", he means "subvene" to be a sy-nonym for "subsidize," but in no dic-tionary that I possess is "subvene" acknowledged as an acceptable verh derived from "subvention." Similary, he says that Fitzgerald "regarded Zel-da and himself as eponymic figures," when the gist of the passage makes clear that the word he wants is "em-hlemate". hlemanc." hiemanc." Careless writing in the name of F. Scott Fitzgerald hardly is appropriate, but careless writing is par for the course on the campuses these days. In the end Bruccoli's shortcomings are of less consecuence than the honesty of less consequence than the hooesty of his research.

tion game, to he played in the casserole of the Yale Bowl in August, it was obviously a game that would inflame New York football fans. But in the brooding Giant camp in Fairfield, Conn., the official word was that this was just another game. The name "Jets" was about as welcome in Giant camp as Communist China was in the United Nations in those days. This ostrich mentality flew against all the sporting history of New York, where baseball fans had argued Mickey, Willie and the Dake in luncheonettes in the 1950s, and sometimes a basketball game would break out during colege punchouts at Madisou Square Garden. Nowadays New Yorkers have recent crosstown rivalries that count in the standings: Rangers-Islanders on the Long Island Rail Road, Knicks-Nets for the championship of the Lincoln Tunnel. No Thanks

Even the World Series had a touch of a metropolitan rumble. There are no more Brooklyn Dodgers, but Tom Lasorda pitched eight games for Brooklyn in 1954-55, and Steve Garvey's father once drove the old Dodgers' bus. Garvey still wears a blue Brooklyn Dodger T-shirt under his Los Angeles uniform.

How many New Yorkers secrethad Brooklyn scripted across their hearts last week as the Dodgers played against the hired Hessians belonging to the man from Cleveland?

azilov, upb

By Bill Shirley Los Angeles Times Service

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. - The U.S. Olympic Committee once functioned as a New York travel agency whose only responsibility was selecting and sending teams to the Olympic Games. Coming to life every four years, its mem-bers marched in front of U.S. athletes in the major capitals of the world - and then disappeared like the citizens of Brigadoon.

Its chief claim was that it was the only national Olympic committee not subsidized by its government. Between Olympics it had no contact with the nation's amateur athletes, and to raise money for its puny budget it virtually went door to door with its hand out. The image it projected was arrogance, pomposity and ineptitude.

But today, in this Rocky Mountain neighbor-hood, the USOC is a thriving corporation charged —by an act of Congress — with coordinating and developing all amateur sports in America, with particular cuphasis on international competition. It seems to be doing the best job of training ath-letes this side of East Germany.

The new concern for current and future Olympians has even made the committee popular with many athletes. After decades of not focusing its Olympic effort under one organization and of op-erating with limited funds and interest, the United States finally seems to be on the right track at a time when a nation's political system is sometimes measured by how fast a young man can run 100 meters or a young woman can swim the backstroke. If large sums of money are to be spent in an attempt to buy gold medals, ideology is as good an excuse as any.

No Propaganda Tool

But to America's credit, sport is still not a propaganda tool or part of governmental foreign poli-cy. American kids are not plucked from school at the age of 7 or 8, ordered to special sports schools and turned into expert swimmers or gymnasts. The older ones who hope their skills at the USOC's invitation and expense are all volunteers. And although the costs are enormous, money to pay for the USOC's increased efforts to put the nation on its feet athletically still must be collected from individuals and corporations. The success of U.S. Olympic teams now de-pends on how efficiently the USOC carries out the mandate it got from the government three years ago. It's an odd role for a group which, for 75 years, was as guilty as the next organization of the internecine warfare that blocked development of all bot a few amateur sports. The Amateur Athletic Union and National Collegiate Athletic Association must share the blame.

While the USOC was effectively isolated from the process that produced most Olympic athletes, the nation still won a bundle of medals in the few sports that Americans concentrated on in colleges and in a handful of AAU chibs. To most Americans, the Olympics have meant track and field, swimming, boxing and basketball. But there are 21 summer Olympic sports. And they all count.

Postwar Changes

U.S. domination of the Summer Olympics began to slip when the Soviet Union entered a team at Helsinki in 1952, And by 1972, East Germany was a power. Things had changed: The United States was fast becoming No. 3 and it was appar-ent the USOC would have to improve its act, espocially after several demoralizing committee-athlete confrontations at Munich.

The result was a major restructuring job that moved F. Don Miller to the top as executive director and gave the athletes clout in making policy. Starting in 1973, athletes composed 20 percent of all policy-making committees, a rule that was put into the bylaws in 1978. There is no record that favored the athlete 80 percent of the time - in 12 of 15 instances. Due process has come to amateur sports. Athletes must be informed of specific procedures used in the selection of teams; they cannot be deprived of a hearing: they may be represented by counsel.

Socialist countries have gone that far,

Recalling the prohlems of Munich, Miller said, "We came off a very hard experience in many arcas, so it was a chance to review, analyze and begin to restructure. It was apparent that we did not have effective communications with our athletes, so we provided the 20-percent rule. Why are we here? We have one purpose — to serve our athletes."

That was not always the case, of course, but today there is evidence that the USOC is succeeding. To better serve the athletes - both the elite and the inexperienced — it has established a so-phisticated sports-medicine program and is expanding its 38-acre training center that opened in 1977 to include a fieldhouse with six gymnasiums and an aquatic center.

The price of providing grass-roots development of amateur sport and aiding elite athletes is steep, and the USOC's hudget rose faster than interest rates. For 1981-84, it's $71.2 million, up about $20 million over the preceding four years. When Mil-ler joined the USOC in 1969 the budget was $8.2 million.

The Mexico City Olympics in 1968 cost the USOC $6.8 million. By 1980 the forecast for Mos-cow was $26 million. The USOC also makes direct grants to the 37 national governing bodies that supervise all sports in the Olympic and Pan-Amer-ican Games. The grants have grown from $75,000 to $15.1 million in less than 20 years.

The USOC built its own 400-meter track for $1.8 million; the fieldhouse, now under construc-tion, will cost $4.5 million, and the swimming stadium is expected to come in at $7.5 million.

USOC President William E. Simon is a volunteer, but Miller pays a staff of 70 to 75. The National Sports Festival, an Olympic-type competi-tion that the USOC considers a useful tool for motivating athletes, for evaluating medical staffers and coaches and for making the public aware of amateur sport, was once an expensive budget item — but is almost paying its own way today. The USOC lost only $400,000 on the most recent one in Syracuse last July.

The Monthly Tab

About 800 athletes, the daily average, live off the USOC here while they are training. The cost for room and board per day per athlete is $14.33. All things considered, the USOC is spending $1.5 million a month.

It costs the USOC 36 cents to raise a dollar, 20 cents for soliciting and 16 cents for administra-tion. On the oext hudget the total cost is pegged at 29 cents

Why did the United States wait so long to assist its athletes? There are two reasons, probably the remarkable inability of the country to speak, athletically, with one strong voice; and a shortage of money. There was no government handout.

College athletes were subsidized in splendid style and a few more subsisted on meager rations for AAU clubs, But the NCAA and AAU quarreled endlessly and childishly over who would sponsor what,

It took an act of Congress in November, 1978, to make the USOC the sole boss of amateur sport, whatever else the act says in almost three pages of fine print.

The USOC, Miller says, is an organization of organizations. Its membership encompasses all national governing bodies, the NCAA, national high school federations, the Jewish Welfare Board, the armed forces and the Catholic Youth Orgnization - groups that cooduct national programs.

But what the USOC will need in 1984, more than a stadium full of athletes groomed to perfection by corporate contributions and biomechan-before the game. The Jets were coming off an unexpected Super Bowl victory and the Giants were winding up a dec-ade of disintegration. The worst fears of the crowd at P.J. Clarke's, a Manhattan saloon, had come to

There was still a touch of headin-the-mnd for Sunday's game in the swamplands of New Jersey. The prevailing logic was that the Jets have more-traditional rivalries with Buffalo or Miami, while the Giants have more incentive for annual opponents like Dallas or Philadelphia. But the Giants needed Sunday's game as a springboard to their best season in eons; tickets were impossible to obtain, meaning that the fans knew something. But the springboard, and the Gi-7.

But in 1969 New York had the Yankees sulking in disgrace while the Mets renewed all that old National League passion, but those teams oever met when it counted. The Jets-Giants exhibition that Angust revived all the New York center-field controversy: Namath vs. Tarkenton, bad boy vs. good — if you believed the images. Sherman was the Giant coach that hot and humid summer, and he wanted no part of a crosstown rivalry, wes though he had played for Brooklyn College and could remember what it was like to take the field against City College. Sherman was under pressure to win a lot of games quickly that summer.

But he knew what kind of bodies he had in camp. Players would disappear in the middle of the night and new ones would materialize at dawn; scarred old rejects who would wobble through a week of tryouts and then mysteriously "retire." Sherman bad to send this army of the lost against the Super Bowl champions. He could not afford to inflame any Jets with rhetoric about a big game

Because of realignment and an attempt to cut down expensive travel, the Islanders and Rangers will play each other eight times this season. Alouettes, 3-13. Gain CFL Playoffs

United Press International MONTREAL - Rookie halfback David Overstreet scored on a 7-yard run and a 26-yard touchdown pass from Ken Johnson Sunday to power the Montreal Alouettes to a 39-15 triumph over the Ottawa Rough Riders and into the Canadian Football League's Eastern Division playoffs.

The victory ended one of the league's strangest races ever for a playoff berth. The Alouettes fin-ished the sensor with a 3-13 mark, edging the 2-14 Toronto Argo-oants, who failed to win in their season finale Saturday against Hamilton

Montreal and Ottawa will play Saturday to decide which will face Hamilton for the eastern cham-pionship. British Columbia will play at Winnipeg for the right to meet Edmonton for the eastern crown.

NEW YORK - A 15th-century Italian handbook on health, illustrated with 132 miniature paintings depicting everything from sex to spaghetti-making, was sold for $225,000.

New York rare book dealer Hans P. Kraus placed the winning bid for the northern Italy manu-script, titled "The Tacuinum Sanitatis."

'Yeah, but you can't get around town on a piece of paper." "Believe me, this is no time to get out of paper. If you don't want to put your money in notes, put it in stock. It's more of a gamble, but it's still paper.'

"What kind of stock?" "There is a company called A&C that is rumored to be buying out the P&Q Company. The buyers have offered 65 pieces of A&C paper for each P&Q certificate, which is only worth 30. If you buy, and the deal goes through, you'll make a paper profit of 35 certificates."

"What does the A&C Company "Who knows!"

"Is the P&Q Company making any money?" * * *

"No. That's why A&C wants to buy it. You see, P&Q had a bad buy it. You see, reco had a bad year and has huge tax losses. A&C had a good year and made a lot of profits. So, if it buys the losing company, A&C will be able to offset its profits against P&Q's losses, and then it won't have to pay any taxes to the government."

"Sounds like a good deal. Would it he all right to buy a dishwasher this fall? Ann says the other one is falling apart."

"This is no time to buy a dishwasher. I need all your cash to put into an All-Savers account so you can get tax-free interest." Great, But what do we do with

For more than four years, London has been the victim of severe speak to hum all the ume about this event which we have coming up, and I will say Rysanek will sing this and Tatiana [Troyanos] will sing this and Carol [Neblett] will sing that, and do you think that's right and he will say 'yes.' brain damage suffered when a cardiac arrest ended his career while he was touring Germany as head of the Washington Opera. And he will say 'no' when he doesn't like it. And I say things

On Wednesday, the most daz-zling array of operatic talent ever assembled for a single event in this benefit-crazed city will join ranks for a "Gala Tribute to to him again and again because you don't know how much imme-George London" that will be diate memory he has. He obviously has memories of the past filmed for broadcast on the U.S. PBS TV network next spring and recorded for commercial release perfectly."

George London was a major Mozart and Wagner singer. In addition to being a fine actor and by RCA. The benefit will take place at the Kennedy Center, a superb stylist, he brought to roles like Don Giovanni, the Fly-ing Datchman and the Count in "The Marriage of Figaro" a where London once served as ar-

Joan Sutherland will sing Mey-erbeer. Manihy Horne will sing "Danny Boy." Shirley Verrett will sing "Ritoma Vincitor" from "Aida." Nicolai Gedda will sing tense, dark and sometimes mys-terious sound that none of his contemporaries quite matched.

Boris Godunov

Tchaikovsky. Leonie Rysanek will sing "Dich teure Halle" from "Tannhänser." Evelyn Lear will sing "Vilja" from "The Merry Widow." He made his debut as George Burnson in 1941, singing Dr. Grenvil in "La Traviata" at the Hollywood Bowl. By 1947, he Beverly Sills will preside. James Levine, the Met's music was George London and was touring what he called "practicaldirector, will accompany, as will Julius Rudel, Sills' predecessor as head of the New York City Opty-every town in America" with the Bel Canto Trio. He was the bass baritone; the soprano was era. The money goes to a new or-ganization founded in August, the Opera Singers Disability Fund, which will contribute to Frances Yeend, who went on to the Met; and the tenor was a fellow named Mario Lanza, whose future would turn out to be in London's care and become a permoties

Triumph in Moscow, 1960.

London finally decided that his best opportunity would he in Europe. His debut was an auspicious one, with the Vienna Opera as Amonasro in "Aida," and before the year was out he was a sensation as Boris in Vienna. The Boris of Mussorgsky and Pushkin was his favorite role, and had been ever since as a child be sat around playing by the hour the recordings of Feodor Chaliapin, the most famous of all Borises. There seems something preordained about the circumstances under which George and Nora. Sheldon met in 1954 at the New York home of the Chaliapin family, after he had been singing Boris" at the Met. Nora was the daughter of a prominent Russian, family that, like the Chaliapins, left Russia after the revolution and ended up in New York be-cause of World War IL

Last week at the Kennedy Center, her face still youthful and her voice vibrant, and apologizing for her undetectable ac-cent, Nora London described the meeting: "My mother and Chaliclose and I had known them all my life, And every Russian East-er they had a big buffet and a celebration. George and Leo Taubman [his accompanist] were years ago." They were married in Europe about a year later.

and fondest memories of those days in Europe is of Wieland Wagner, whose abstract, modernistic settings of his grandfather's operas at Bayreuth blazed the most important path of postwar opera design.

Wagners was no bar to the friendship of the Londons, both of whom were Jewish, with Wieland, who died in 1966. "Wieland made it known that he was strongly anti-Nazi. Of course, he had met Hitler at Bayreuth and he had no choice but to join the Hitler Youth, And of course his strongly pro-Nazi mother was no longer a part of things by then." George London was especially qualified to understand the prob-lems of singers, because his own voice started to fail in the mid-1960s. He consulted doctors around the world, but the mystery was never solved. For a while he continued to sing. He stopped in 1967. "He took the decision himself," his wife recalled. "I didn't say anything. And one day we were in Switzer-land, and he came and said. Tm not going to sing anymore." Soon afterward he became the Kennedy Center's first artistic administrator, served for five years as president of the Ameri-can Guild of Musical Artists, ran the American Opera Institute and took over the Washington Opera in 1975.

After London first fell into a coma, the Londons moved from Washington to Westchester County. London's condition has been progressing slowly. "The prognosis is not optimis-tic," said Nora London. "It can take 10 years, and it may never - But, on the other hand, he's done so many things that every-body said he'd never do."

Richard Burton is to portray composer Richard Wagner in an television biography to be released in 1983 for the centenary of the German composer's death. The British producers said Vanessa Redgrave is considering an offer to Cosima Wagner, while Daphne Wagner, the composer's second wife, Cosima Wagner, while Daphne Wagner, the composer's great-granddaughter, will play Princess Metternich. Sir George Solti and the Vienna Philharmonic will prowide the music, along with a cast of singers including British soprano Gwyneth Jones and East German heldentenor Peter Hoffman. Actors already signed include Sir Rahph Richardson, who plays one of King Ludwig IP's ministers, and Irish actress Gemma Craven as Wagner's first wife, Minna. The eight-hour production will cost £4 illion ($7.5 million). "It's been three years in the planning and shooting starts next January," said a spokesman for the independent British producers, London Trust Cultural Productions Ltd.

the world's fifth highest peak, Mount Makalu, alone, according to a report by his team's leader to the Nepalese tourism ministry Jerzy Knimezka, 33, who scaled Mount Everest, the world's highest peak, in 1980, reached the 8,475. meter (27,805-foot) summit Oct. 15 after climbing alone for four daya. He had set out with Wojciech Kim. tyka, 34, of Kraków, and Alex MacImyre 27, of Manchester, Eng. land. But Kurtyka, who was lead. ing the group, gave up with slight frostbite and MacIntyre abandoned the attempt because of the difficult route above 7,900 meters (25,900 feet).

Moshe Dayan left his prized archaeological collection of ancient Israelite artifacts to his wife Rachel along with his house and personal fortune, according to a fac-simile of his will published in the daily Yedioth Ahronoth. Dayan often spent his leisure time on private digging expeditions, and was almost killed in 1968 when a cave collapsed ou him. His hobby was also a source of controversy. Crit-ics accused Dayan of breaking the law by taking artifacts that should full have gone to the state Dayar claimed he only dug up relics that otherwise would have been lost through neglect.
